Concept Note on the Theme

Democratic governance is a condition in which liberty, equality and justice is realized in a democratic political framework, where the government is sensitive to the developmental needs and expectations of its citizens. In the context of the present era of globalization, the Indian state- the largest democracy of the world- has taken several reformative measures such as, right to information act, citizen charter, E-governance, Lokpal and Lokayukta to strengthen its democratic governance process. Albeit, it faces severe governance challenges in the present century and that may be identified as corruption, poverty, un-employment, ever increasing socio-economic inequalities, gender discrimination, terrorism and globalization and so on. The recent resurgence of religiosity has been to erode our plural and secular democratic fabric and also democratic values such as tolerance. In fact, the viability of Indian democratic governance is associated with responsible political leadership, stable government; enlighten policy-making, democratic decentralization of power, civil society and independent judiciary.
